----- ID3Sort creates folders based on the information contained in the ID3 tag of the MP3 file. An example of the ID3 tags in an MP3 file would look something like this: "ID3ID [sample] [genre] [year] [album] [track] [composer] [title] [artist] [album artist] [album title] [length] [bitrate]" In order to separate the songs into different categories, you must enter the specific parameters that the tool uses to find the information you want. To start, select the file you want to organize with ID3Sort. Next, you will need to choose the genre you want to organize your music in. To do this, enter the genre or genres you want to use (album, single, death metal, etc.), and then press OK. The tool will then display the file's genre and the subgenre (if any) in the main window. This is because there might be more than one genre in the file. All songs in the same genre will be displayed in a column. If the genre contains subgenres, you will get all the subgenres displayed as well (Death metal, metal, death, thrash, black, goth, etc.). To organize the files, you will need to select the folder where you want them to be placed. By default, the tool will organize the songs in the directory selected. To change this, press the F3 key to bring up the File Explorer window. Open the main window, then click on the directory you want to use. This will open the directory in the file explorer window, and make it selected. After this, the tool will display the file, the folder, and the ID3 tags. To change the folder you are organizing, use the F3 key to open the File Explorer window. Click on the directory, then click on the folder you want to organize, then press the OK button. To finish, press the OK button. Then, you can check the folder you are using to organize the songs. If you want, you can check the other folder as well, to be sure you are organizing all the songs. Then, you can check the information that you want to use to organize the files. To do this, you will
